I grow products through acquisition and monetization. I look at the whole user journey, from click and install to payment and renewal. I find where the funnel leaks money, test hypotheses and scale what pays off. In ads I optimize for sign-ups and payments, not for the cheapest install.

EXPERIENCE

B2C subscription service in Telegram — Growth Marketer
2025 – present

Part-time · 90–105K monthly active users, two years with no metrics before

- ×7.5 revenue in a year: 91K → 680K ₽ a month, paying users +63%, revenue per payer +20% — by monetizing the base while inflow shrank
- Initiated end-to-end product analytics: funnel from launch to payment, cohorts, LTV, the impact of every change; the first review caught a double-charging bug
- Reworked the free tier: only ~2% of actives hit the limit → cut it: one-off purchases +40% (≈ +55K ₽ a month), weekly revenue +10%
- Made the case for a pricing ladder: new tiers bring a third of revenue, 30-day payer LTV +20–40%
- Took part in launching auto-renewal: renewals 0 → 290K ₽ a month, 90-day LTV ×1.9

Digital agency — Senior Traffic Manager
2024 – 2026

Acquisition for major brands: VK Ads, Yandex Direct, Telegram Ads

- Fintech app: 25.8K installs in 4 months, 14%+ reached Gosuslugi sign-up; CPI –45% ($1.5–1.6 → $0.88) as volume grew; 10 funnels and an A/B test of setups
- Funnel to first shift: 2,000+ applications, 18% reached step 5, 360 first shifts
- Insurance online event: my channels brought 62% of all attendees, 60% of followers reached the broadcast
- Xiaomi store chain: ~30% repeat sales; $965K revenue from VK over the project's 3 years (I ran it ~1.5 years), ×2 on the same budget
- FORX: +211% Ozon sales in 5 months, VK follower from $0.02
